

The Dirty List

August 2023

About the 'Dirty List'

We have produced this list in order to highlight the role of international companies in assisting the military to continue to commit human rights violations, and to highlight the role of international companies which operate in the country in a way that contributes to human rights violations and environmental destruction.

We hope that being named on this list will prompt some companies to end their involvement with the military or operations linked to human rights and environmental problems. In doing so, they act as a warning to other companies.

This list is an ongoing project by Burma Campaign UK and will be regularly updated. We welcome suggestions for companies that should be included on this list. Please email mark.farmaner@burmacampaign.org.uk with details. Sources of information provided will be treated in confidence.

We are aware that this list is by no means comprehensive. The OECD has estimated that the military controlled Union of Myanmar Economic Holdings Ltd (UMEH) alone has at least 50 joint ventures with international companies. Information on UMEH and the other military conglomerate, Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC) and all their subsidiaries is mostly not publicly available.

Burma Campaign UK decided to resume publication of this 'Dirty List' after consultation with partners from Burma and our supporters. Detailed information about the thinking behind this list is available in our briefing here: <http://burmacampaign.org.uk/media/Is-it-time-to-revive-the-Dirty-List.pdf>

Criteria for companies being placed on the list

Supplying the military with arms or any other equipment or services of any kind, directly or indirectly, and doing business of any kind with the military and military owned and controlled companies, including companies of individuals in or closely linked to the military (eg if a military person uses his position to promote their business interests but does so in the name of or for the benefit of a relative).

Operations in Burma linked to human rights violations.

Operations in Burma linked to environmental destruction, including, for example, dams not meeting standards of the World Commission on Dams (WCD) recommendations or coal extraction and use.

Now that the military have seized control of state-owned enterprises and revenue from state-owned enterprises goes to the military, doing business with state-owned enterprises also will also result in companies being placed on the 'Dirty List', unless that company can demonstrate that the military receive no significant financial or other form of benefit.

All information is based on the best information we are able to obtain. Where possible we use public sources. Companies may be placed on the list without making sources public if we are confident of the source and cannot release the information for security reasons.

All companies are notified in advance that we intend to place them on the Dirty List. We are willing to engage in dialogue regarding the information we have on their operations and will immediately correct any incorrect information, with a public record of that correction.

We are willing to engage in dialogue with companies but only on the basis that we are discussing when and how they end their involvement with the military or human rights violations. We are not willing to engage in dialogue which is designed by the company to lead to an endless process in order for them to be able to tell shareholders and stakeholders that they are engaged in dialogue, then throw a few dollars at a local health clinic and post pictures of smiling local people on their website.

In general, but at our discretion, we will publish responses from companies unless there is good reason not to do so.

Bharat Freight Group/A to Z EXIM Private Limited

Bharat Freight is an Indian shipping and logistics company. In Burma it is the operator of the controversial Sittwe Port in Rakhine State. The port is part of the Indian-backed Kaladan multi-modal development project. Since its inception more than ten years ago, the Kaladan project has led local civil society and human rights organisations to raise concerns about the environmental and human rights impact, including land confiscation and use of new roads by the military to increase militarisation, as well as increased militarisation for security building the projects. The National Unity Government and others have opposed new development projects agreed with the illegitimate military.

Britannia Steam Ship Insurance Association Ltd. Associated to Britannia P&I

Britannia P&I is a British insurance club which insures shipping vessels. Research by Amnesty International exposed Britannia P&I insuring a vessel which delivered aviation fuel to Burma. The Burmese military has increasingly used airstrikes against civilian targets, creating a human rights and humanitarian crisis. Burma's democracy movement is calling for a complete ban on the delivery of aviation fuel to Burma because the military has taken aviation fuel intended for civilian use. Britannia P&I has failed to give an undertaking to add delivery of aviation fuel to Burma to exclusions for cover.

Facebook/Meta

Meta is an American company which earns revenue from advertising on social media websites and apps which it operates. Its most popular social media brand is Facebook.

For the past decade Facebook has failed to take action to stop its platform being used to incite hatred and violence of minorities in Burma, in particular the Rohingya Muslim minority and Muslims in general.

Even since Facebook belatedly removed Burmese military Facebook pages, it is still taking insufficient action to stop the military using Facebook for propaganda purposes.

Facebook has also allowed the Burmese military to take over Burmese government Facebook Pages and to use them to promote military lies and propaganda.

Facebook has not acknowledged the role it played in the genocide of the Rohingya and has not implemented the recommendations on the United Nations Fact-Finding Mission.

Ircon International

Ircon International is a state-owned Indian railways and infrastructure company. In Burma it has been appointed as 'project implementation agency' for part of the Kaladan Multi-Model transport company. Since its inception more than ten years ago, the Kaladan road project has led local civil society and human rights organisations to raise concerns about the environmental and human rights impact, including land confiscation and use of the roads by the military to increase militarisation, as well as increased militarisation for security building the roads. This new stage of the project has now gone ahead following the military coup at a time when the National Unity Government and others have opposed new development projects agreed with the illegitimate military.

North Standard

North Standard is a British insurance club which insures shipping vessels. Research by Amnesty International exposed North Standard insuring a vessel which delivered aviation fuel to Burma. The Burmese military has increasingly used airstrikes against civilian targets, creating a human rights and humanitarian crisis. Burma's democracy movement is calling for a complete ban on the delivery of aviation fuel to Burma because the military has taken aviation fuel intended for civilian use. North Standard has failed to give an undertaking to add delivery of aviation fuel to Burma to exclusions for cover.

Sinohydro is a Chinese state-owned construction and hydropower company. It is involved in the construction of dams in Shan State, including the Yeywa dams and Dee Doke dam. In Karen State it is involved in the Hatgyi dam, linked to conflict and human rights violations. In Chin State, it is involved in five dams, including on the Mee Chaung river, which is in a conflict zone.

Sinohydro was also involved in the construction of Bhasan Char in the Bay of Bengal, where the government of Bangladesh plans to force up to 1,000,000 Rohingya refugees to move to. Bhasan Char is not suitable for permanent human habitation. It floods during the monsoon, is extremely vulnerable to extreme weather events, and the area is prone to piracy. Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh have stated that they do not want to be moved to such an inhospitable environment.

UK Mutual Steam Ship Assurance Association (Bermuda) Ltd. affiliated to UK P&I

UK P&I is a British insurance club which insures shipping vessels. Research by Amnesty International exposed UK P&I insuring a vessel which delivered aviation fuel to Burma. The Burmese military has increasingly used airstrikes against civilian targets, creating a human rights and humanitarian crisis. Burma's democracy movement is calling for a complete ban on the delivery of aviation fuel to Burma because the military has taken aviation fuel intended for civilian use. UK P&I has failed to give an undertaking to add delivery of aviation fuel to Burma to exclusions for cover.

United Aircraft Corporation (UAC)

The United Aircraft Corporation is a part state owned Russian aircraft manufacturer, sanctioned by the European Union following the Russian invasion of Ukraine.

Its subsidiary, the Irkut Corporation, is selling 6 SU-30 fighter jet aircraft to the Burmese military. The sale agreement was announced on 22nd January. The Myanmar Times described the jets as 'suitable for Myanmar's counter-insurgency operations'.

Use of fighter jets in so called counter insurgency operations have frequently resulted in injuries and deaths of ethnic civilians. Irkut Corporation is also selling Yakovlev Yak-130 multi-role combat and training jets to the Burmese military. The jets have reportedly been seen in Kachin state, where jets have killed civilians. United Aircraft Corporation also manufacture the Sukhoi civilian aircraft brand. UAC has also been upgrading Mig-29 fighter jets previously sold to the Burmese military.

Yatai Group

Yatai Group is a Chinese conglomerate involved in a wide range of business activities. In Burma it has partnered with the Border Guard Force, formerly known as the Democratic Karen Buddhist Army, in the development of Shwe Koko in Karen state, known locally as China Town. The Border Guard Force (BGF) are effectively part of the Burmese Army, under their control and fighting side by side, but allowed to control some areas of Karen State for business purposes.

BGF has been responsible for human rights violations that meet the criteria of war crimes and crimes against humanity when fighting alongside the Burmese military attacking ethnic Karen civilians and areas under the control of the Karen National Union. In 2019 BGF forces were fighting alongside the Burmese Army in Rakhine State.

In addition to the human rights record of Yatai Group's partner the BGF/Burmese Army, the development project is itself linked to human rights violations with farmers and others having land confiscated without compensation. There is no transparency or consultation in the development of the project.
